Ross stays as talks progress DAVID MAKOVSKY

and JON IMMANUEL

ISRAEL and the Palestinians held talks last night in Jerusalem 10 see if they could resolve the remaining differences on security aspects of IDF redeployment the way they solved the civilian issues early yesterday morning.

The key question is under what conditions the IDF will be allowed to reenter the Palestinian securitydominated areas of Hehron known as H1, which makes up at least 80 percent of the city.

After reports the talks on Hehron were deadlocked on Monday night, a "flood passed under the bridge" early yesterday morning, an Israeli source close to the negotiators said.

The source attributed the change to US peace coordinator Dennis Ross's dramatic announcement had nack his hags and was flying home. This gave the talks impetus to move forward, and after some progress was made "we called Ross at the airport and told him not to go," he said. Palestinian Authority secretarygeneral Mahmoud Abhas and Information Minister Yasser Abed-Rabbo had joined the talks on the order of PA Chairman Yasser Arafat, who had sounded pessimistic on Monday evening. There also were surprise talks yesterday between 1DF Chief of Staff Lt.-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-Shahak and Abbas. In last night's talks, there were indications that Israeli officials want a reaffirmation of the draft security accord which was worked out in the middle of last week between the heads of the security talks, 1DF Planning Branch head Maj.-Gen. Shaul Mofaz and heads of Palestinian Preventive Security Mohammed Dahlan and Jibril Rajoub. However, wheo the sides arrived in Taba last week, Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat retracted the deal by adding what Israeli officials say was unacceptable language. Israeli officials attribute Arafat's willingness to conclude a deal on civilian issues to the fear of angering the US. Arafat did not want the car to go off the cliff. So he pulled back from the brink. Now we will see if this attitude on the civilian issue is the case on the security issue as well," a senior official said. Ross and other US officials were involved in last night's talks. Another factor which may have modified Arafat's decision on the 310 - S. 888. civilian issues is that French President Jacques Chirac did not make a public case for the Palestinian positions in the talks as some hoped. المعنية والمعالية

Assad has softened stance, Chirac tells PM

FRENCH President Jacques Chirac has "brought from Damascus a softening of the Syrian terms for the resumption of peace talks," government sources in Jerusalem said yesterday.

At a joint press conference with Chirac, Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu said the French president had brought with him a favorable message from Damascus. The two met privately for an hour-and-a-half.

Chirac spent some 14 hours with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus over the weekeod before coming to Jerusalem.

These sources refused to say what the improved terms are, nor would they say whether the terms had changed cough to bring about the resumption of talks. Syrian-Israeli peace talks have been suspended since February.

Another senior official said: "Chirac brought a favorable message from Syria. Now we need to cross-check this with the Syrians to ascertain that this is indeed the case." He refused to elaborate.

One source voiced cautious optimism, saying "If what Chirac says is true, it looks like both sides can find a formula that they can live with.'

For the Syrians to make concessions to the French would be consistent with their objective of providing Paris with a higger role in the Middle East. Until now, the Syrians have insisted that they would resume peace talks "where they left off," expecting the Netanyahu government to accept as hinding an unsigned 1995 agreement on principles governing Golan-related security arrangements.

Officials in the Prime Minister's Office favor speaking to the French about a greater role in the Middle East. But these officials made it clear they do not want French involvement in the sensitive issues of territory and security arrangements, suggesting Paris could be best involved in multilateral discussions on regional cooperation.

"They say they don't want to supplant the US, but want some role for themselves as a Mediterranean power so they are not just seen as writing checks," said an official in the Prime Minister's Office, "We should have a dialogue with them to discuss such a role for non-bilateral aspects of Middle East peace This official insisted that there was "warm chemistry" between Chirac and Netanyahu and said that "Chirac is genuinely interested in trying to translate his instinctive friendship for Israel into specific positions."

At the joint press conference, Netanyahu praised Chirac as a friend of Israel and encouraged him to support efforts to promote the peace process.

"We are very much aware of France's influence and of President Chirac's justified prestige in the Arah states. I'm con-

The prime minister stressed that Chirac's visit to the region is a very important step on the road to peace, but stressed that the only way to reach peace with Syria is through direct negotiations. "It is no secret that Israel and its partners and friends in the world have different opinions (on the peace process], but we share one essential idea, that the solution must be found by the parties themselves," Netanyahu said.

"There is no option of reaching solution through violence, threats to use violence or war," said Netanyahu.

Chirac said that during his talks in Damascus be did not get the impression that Syria has bellicose intentions.

"I hope that this information has no foundation, since such a thing would be total madness," Chirac said.

Regarding talks with the Palestinians on the Hebron redeployment, Netanyahu said: "It's close to an end [but] it's not yet finisbed. I bope it will end quick-

"I'm convinced that the moment we reach the finish line there could be, and it's even desirable for there to be, a meeting between me and [PA Chairman Yasser] Arafat, to tie up all the loose ends and enable the official announcement about the end of the negotiations," be said.

Chirac said Assad promised him that he would order a search for Nazi criminals Alois Brunner and Georg Fischer, who are believed to be living in Syria.

During talks with members of the Knesset Interior Committee, Arafat moved away from his standard formula that Israel must "implement what has been agreed upon" and said, "We will continue today and tomorrow and we hope we shall find a compromise." It was the first time Arafat had spoken of his readiness to make concessions at the talks.

The Israeli source said that in be civil affairs committee the Palestinians agreed that at a certain distance from Jewish resi-(Continued nn Page 2)

When the GSS officer tried to explain that be was only protecting the president from possible harm, Chirac replied. "This is no problem. This is not a method. This is a provocation, You stop now." Chirac then turned to passersby and started to shake hands with them.

Later, when Chirac arrived at the French Church of Sainte Anne, he demanded that no Israeli guards enter.

Chirac said he considered the affair closed. French sources said Chirac iotended to visit the holy places in the Old City without any Israeli security personnel, and that the French Embassy had reached an agreement with the Israeli government under which the visit was to be considered a friendly and cordial visit, but not an official one. The sources said that not having Israeli bodyguards was to stress the fact the France does not recognize Israeli sovereignty over Jerusalem.

A French official also told one of the reporters accompanying Chirac that the half-day visit to the Old City should be considered part of the Palestinian part of Chirac's visit.

Inside, however, the welcome was cooler.

As Chirac sat down next to President Ezer Weizman in the VIP gallery, Moledet leader Rebavam Ze'evi called out: "Will his honor, the president of France, address this House? Are we less worthy than a murderous gang of Palestinians?" referring to Chirac's visit and speech to the Palestinian Legislative Council. "He's disgracing this House," Ze'evi said.

Speaker Dan Tichon read out a prepared speech, stressing that the Knesset reflects all sectors of Israeli society. He also subtly criticized the president, saying: "It is no secret that the issues at the top of our agenda are not agreed on hy all and there are differences of opinions, also with the internatiocal community, which are sometimes difficult and bitter. Col. Zvika is the secood brigade commander to be relieved of duty in the Central Command since Dayan took over last spring. In June, the Jordan Valley brigade commander was removed after infiltrators from Jordan killed three soldiers in an ambush.

Intelligence chief: Syria's military threats are pressure tactic

SYRIA is interested in resuming peace negoti-ations but continues to dangle the military option to pressure Israel into resuming the talks from the point at which they broke off, OC Intelligence Maj.-Gen. Moshe Ya'alon told the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee yesterday.

He said Israel is monitoring the situation in Lebanon and along the Syrian border.

According to an official briefing, Ya'alon told the committee there is relative calm in Lebanon and recent incidents there bave involved shooting from a distance. Syria is try-ing to restrain Hizbullah and Amal in Lebanon, at least until the US elections, he said.

"[But] we can see preparations for attacks by Palestinian groups there," Ya'alon said. He warned that Islamic Jihad might try to mark the anniversary of Fathi Shkaki's death with an attack from Lebanon, including possibly a suicide attack.

Committee chairman Uzi Landau (Likud) said: "Anyone in the Middle East who has Syria as a neighbor should be concerned but we must send a message that violence doesn't pay." Ya'alon said Hamas and the People's Front

Expert: Syria likely to try military Golan operation if deadlock continues

ISRAEL should be prepared for the possibility of a limited Syrian military operation in the North if the deadlock in the negotiations continues after the US presidential elections, according to Middle East expert Gabriel Ben-Dor.

"I think there are various reasons for anxiety in this matter,' said Ben-Dor, professor of political science and Middle East politics at Haifa University.

"The Syrians feel that this is the time to exert pressure on Israel. This is what they are doing on a minor key now and are likely to do with much more emphasis after the US elections.

"They don't see much bope in continuing with a quiet diplomatic initiative," be noted. "They see the need to do something vehement, something much more vocal and even more violent in order to get something moving."

DAVID RUDGE

Ben-Dor noted that the violence that erupted in the territories over the Jerusalem tunnel actually encouraged the Syrians to think along these lines.

They saw that Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat gained more momentum in the negotiating process as well as more respect from Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu as a result of "raising the stakes and engaging in violence that was more or less controlled by Arafat," said Ben-Dor.

The Syrians learn quickly from such examples. They see that controlled, minor violence does pay," he said

Ben-Dor said the Syrians would prefer a controlled and limited action on the border, such as initiating a day of battle on the boundaries and capturing a limited set of Israeli fortifications or taking back some settlements on the northern edge of the Golan Heights.

"Anything like this which demonstrates their resolve and ability to inflict physical punish-ment on Israel will, they believe, accelerate the negotiating process and perhaps force Israel to make the concessions that it is not even contemplating now.

"After the elections, if there is no movement whatsoever, and if Israel continues to demonstrate its resolve not to give an incb on the Golan Heights, the Syrians might feel compelled to take some provocative action to break the stalemate - as they did in 1973." Ben-Dor played down the prob-: should really be prepared for ability of such an initiated action soon," Ben-Dor added.

being originated in Lebanon, although the idea could not be ruled out.

"It is a possibility, but not a strong one. In Lebanon, the rules of the game dictate using third parties and proxies and the Syrians would not want to be associated directly with any aggressive acts in Lebanon," be said. "They feel that morally, ethically and politically they have every justification to attack on the Golan Heights." The basic deadline for the Syrians, he said, is to see whether the elections in the US will produce some mechanism to break the stalemate.

"If not, then they will seriously consider some kind of limited, controlled local set of actions intended to break the stalemate and I think this is something we

OC Intelligence Maj.-Gen. Moshe Ya'alon told the Knesset State Control Committee yesterday that the IDF did not participate in the discussions leading up to the decision to open an exit to the Hasmoncan Tunnel, and he learned of the move about an bour before it took place.

Ya'alon spoke at the closed committee session in a discussion initiated by MK Moshe Shahal (Labor), who asked for an inquiry into the decision-making process preceding the move, and for State Comptroller Miriam Ben-Porat to investigate the matter. The opening of the exit triggered rioting by the Palestinians, who clashed with IDF soldiers.

According to a statement issued by the committee, Ya'alon learned of the decision to open the exit at l a.m. after Yom Kippur, an hour before it was carried out.

Egypt bans weekly showing Netanyahu with a swastika on head

CAIRO (AP) - Egypt yesterday banned a popular weekly newspaper that ran a picture of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu with an Adolf Hitler-style moustache and swastika on his forehead.

Government censors usually demand editors delete stories deemed offensive, "but this time they just confiscated the issue," said Gamal Fahmy, managing editor of El-Dustour.

Fahmy said he was surprised by the ban, which will stop the distribu-tion of today's 85,000 copies of the liberal newspaper.

Censors were not immediately available for comment since word of the ban came after government offices had closed.

But a journalist at El-Dustour said the newspaper was banned because of Israel's complaint to Egypt's ambassador about the front-page picture of Netanyahu in its October 9 issue.

After the complaint, censors called the newspaper's editors and told them to "calm down the tone," he said.

Asked last week about Israel's complaints of attacks in the Egyptian media, President Hosni Mubarak said he could not tell the newspapers what to say but asked them to exercise good taste.

- The Israel College of Optometry in Tel Aviv, under the auspices of Bar-Ilan University
- The Hadassah College of Technology In Jerusalem

These are the only Israell Institutions whose courses are recognized by the MinIstry of Health as complying with the law's requirements.

The Goor School of Optometry in Tel Aviv, which was previously recognized by the above-mentioned law, was, prior to the opening of these two academic institutes, the only exception to this ruling.

'Plan to transfer psychiatric services to health funds not ready for 1997'

JUDY SIEGEL

THE Health Ministry has not yet presented a detailed plan to the Finance Ministry for transferring its responsibility for psychiatric services to the health funds, even though the changeover is scheduled for January 1, The Jerusalem Post has learned. The Health Ministry's failure to present a plan has already led to the changeover being postponed to January, the Treasury spokesman charged yesterday. According to the National Health Insurance Law, which went into effect on January I, 1995, psychiatric and genatric care are to be financed and supplied by the patient's health fund, along with general medical services.

Directors of psychiatric hospitals have been complaining that the Health Ministry is keeping them completely in the dark and they are unable to plan ahead. One director bemoaned the fact that "last July 2, we were told that responsibility would not be transferred on July Who knows what will happen on January

At present, the Health Ministry covers NIS 350 million in hospitalization and community mental health clinic costs. Under the National Health Insurance Law, this expense is to become part of the basket of health services provided by the insurers. Health Ministry spokesman Efi Lahav said yesterday the ministry was "working hard" on the implementation of the plan, but when asked if psychiatric services will be in the bas-ket of health services on January I, said it was up to the Finance Ministry."

That ministry, in turn, pointed a finger at the Health Ministry, saying it favored the transfer in principle but could not approve the transfer, and consider whether allocations will increase, until it receives a detailed plan.

Barak: Supreme Court must make value judgments

EVELYN GORDON

THERE is no court in the world that does oot make value judgments, and Israel's highest court is oo exceptioo, Supreme Court President Aharoo Barak told the Knesset Law Committee yesterday. "There is oo way to avoid value judgmeots in the Supreme Court, because the law is a value-oriented system," be said. "And as sooo as the law reflects values, legal decisions have to reflect values."

Barak explained that courts must frequently resolve disputes in areas where there is a legal vacu-"The court can't say: "There's no oorm, so I won't resolve the dispute' ... If there's no law, [the court] creates the norm. Every court does this," he said. Furthermore, he said, the problem is that the constitution is incomplete.

"The most basic human rights are oot mentioned [in the Basic Laws]," he said. "Most of what is missing is not controversial. But regarding those thiogs that are controversial, my' recommendation is that they not be included. A constitution must be comprised of things about which there is a consensus."

Another major coostitutional problem, Barak said, is that the Basic Laws are too easy to change. Most can be amended by a majority of 2-1. A few, like the Freedom of Occupatioo law, require 61 MKs, but this is still oo protectioo, since any coalitioo includes 61-MKs, he said. On the other hand, he said, the

For instance, two Basic Laws passed in 1992 -Human Dignity and Freedom and Freedom of Occupation - state that an ordinary law can violate the principles established in the Basic Laws only for a purpose that accords with "Israel's values as a Jewish and democratic state." However, the Knesset oever defined what these values are, so the court is forced to do so in order to apply these laws.

These value judgments should oot be subjective, however, they should reflect the values of the society as a whole, he said.

Barak stressed that the Basic Laws should be seen as comprising a constitution. The problem is therefore not that Israel does not have a constitution, be said; the

"If there is a massive majority in society which wants to [change the constitutioo], they should be able to do so," he said. Barak also rejected the idea that There is nothing more nonsen-sical than this idea of a law that 'circumvents the High Court of Justice," he said, stressing that the important questioo is oot whether a law overturns a court ruling, but whether it is a good law or a bad law.

He also discussed the recent attacks on himself and on the Supreme Court, saying they "dam-aged the delicate fabric of Israeli democracy."

Fighting continues among warring Afghan factions and and a second and

WARRING Afghan factions each claimed military gains on the plains north of Kabul in new fighting yesterday, with little sign the front-line had moved much either way.

But against a backdrop of continuing efforts to secure a cease-fire, anti-Taleban fighters began moving up armor and artillery near the front-line, aiming apparently to try to wrest the strategic heights above Kabul from the Taleban.

Fighters of the purist Taleban, who captured Kabul in late September and control threequarters of the country, said earlier they had traded heavy rocket and artillery fire with forces of Ahmad Shah Masood, military chief in the ousted government of President Burhanuddin Rabbani.

The Taleban said they had driven Masood forces from villages west of Hussein Kot, 18 km north of Kabul, and captured 150 prisoners. Reuters correspondent Chris Bird reported from Bagram, 35 km north of Kabul, that armor, artillery and hundreds of troops had reinforced Masood forces, Tracks full of fighters belonging to powerful northern Uzbek chief General Abdul Rashid Dostum drove towards the front-line, with grenade launchers, gun barrels and bayonets pointing skywards, he said.

Everywhere along the front, Masood's fight-ers said they expected to be involved in an imminent large attack.

"We have orders to move forward and take the pass," Sabir (one name), a Masood commander in Hussein Kot, told reporters.

Masood forces said they had taken hills west of the Khair Khana pass which leads int the capital, but there was no sign of fighting sere when reporters traveled through the pass yesterday morning and afternoon.

Taleban fighters who rocketed the village of Kareez Mir, west of the road to Kabul and some 10 km from the city's edge, said they had dislodged Masood commander Mullah Taj Mohammed from the area earlier in the day.

No independent confirmation was available. Masood has in the past 10 days reversed a Taleban offensive on his Panjsber Valley stronghold and taken positions within rocket range of the city, including Bagram military

Kurd leader Talabani says he supports N. Iraq truce

ANKARA (Reuter) - Kurdish militia leader Jalal Talabani said yesterday that he supported a US plan to broker a cease-fire between warring factions in northem Irao.

Pelletreau proposed a cease-fire plan to rival militia leader Massoud Barzani on Monday in a bid to end a recent spate of fighting between their two factions in Kurdish-controlled northern Iraq. It was not immediately clear how and when a cease-fire might take place.

The fighting - which has con-tinued intermittently since Barzani invited Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to intervene and help cap-ture the main city of Arbil from Talabani's forces in late August --has hurt Washington's anti-Baghdad efforts.

The West encouraged Kurds to break from Baghdad in 1991 but has been powerless to resolve a Kurdish power struggle that has since split the mountainous region between the two warlords.

He told Reuters that Lieutenant-Colonel Marcel Senarenze was ambushed along with several other people, including his aides and bodyguards.

The governor of Cibitoke was killed today in an ambusb along with several other people. I can confirm that he is dead," the military spokesman said.

But in the Kenyan capital Nairobi, Innocent Nimpagaritse, a spokesman for the main Burundian Hutu rebel group, said Senarenze was not killed in an ambush but in fighting in eastern Zaire, where he said Burundi's army bad reinforced Banyamulenge Tutsi rebels in their conflict with the Zairean

After more than a year of fighting Hntu rebels have left Burundi's northwestern Cibitoke province a virtual no-go area for the Tutsi-dominated army. All aid work in the province is suspended. More than 150,000 people have died in Burundi's ethnic war over the last three years. Aid workers estimate the death toll is running at 1.000 a month.

Offering a hint of the antagonism that may plague Nicaragua's next government, Sandinista leader Daniel Ortega rejected partial Decisions on which individual results yesterday that show his right-wing rival headed for the presidency. Claiming irregularities and discrepancies between official figures and his own party's count, Ortega said former Managua Mayor Arnoldo Aleman's victory declaration was premature.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) -

"At this time we cannot recognize the results since we found a series of anomalies, especially referring to the information that arrived at [the computation center] by telegram," Ortega said.

With 54 percent of the vote counted, Aleman and his Liberal Alliance Party seem headed for the presidency today with a lead of nearly 10 percentage points over Ortega and his Sandinista National Liberation Front.

Former US president Jimmy Carter later disclosed that election authorities would address Ortega's concerns by comparing vote results received at a national computing center against those recorded at some 9,000 voting precincts nationwide.

Carter said the move would delay the release of final official results by several days, but emphasized it was not a recount and that the vote counting was continuing normally. "There was a general consensus among the observers that there was no degree of fraud to subvert

Aleman declared victory Monday when the first results were announced, promising "to form a national government so we can all make the change" for the good of Nicaragua.

Few initially had expected any candidate to get the 45 percent of the vote needed to win outright and avoid a runoff after Sunday's election. But at latest count, Aleman has 48.5 percent to Ortega's 39 percent. Twenty-one other candidates shared the rest. No additional results were expected until late yesterday. Ortega, who led the Sandinistas during their decade-long rule of Nicaragua during the 1980s, recalled that when he lost the presidency to Violeta Chamorro in 1990 he admitted defeat immediately.

But he said he could not do so this time because "we found serious irregularities."

Apartheid police say politicians must take blame

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) -An apartheid police chief told South Africa's "truth commission" yesterday that his men had killed black activists rather than arrest them and believed they had government approval to do so.

The testimony from retired police brigadier Jack Cronje heaped further blame on the country's political leaders for apartheid alrocities after evidence on Monday directly implicated ex-president P.W. Botha in dirty tricks.

President Nelson Mandela said yesterday the evidence by former police commissioner Johan van der Merwe that Botha had personally ordered the bombing of a building used by black activists in 1988 did not surprise him. "I do not think there is anything

Cronje, who commanded a

"As far as I understood and I am still convinced of it ... [the] action against the liberation movements was sanctioned by the government of the day," said Cronje, one of five policemen asking for pardons in return for telling all about 40 state-sponsored murders in the last decade of white dominatioo.

Cronje said the fight against black liberation movements in the 1980s was part of the war against communism and was overseen by a state security council that included senior police, soldiers and politicians.

Cronje said the only way to counter activists was to kill them. Jail was a short-term solution and the law too cumber-

MARILYN HENRY NEW YORK

OSEPH Oppenheimer reveled in a majestic life of opulence and authority. But his magnificent life, although his greatest feat, also led to his doom. Oppenheimer, known as Jud Suess, was the extreme symbol of the Hofjuden - the Court Jews. Their privilege and power at the dawn of modern times usually came at great peril. Jud Suess rose higher than any Court Jew in Central Europe, for a brief moment and at a terrible cost. Oppenheimer had latched on to Karl Alexander, the Duke of Wurttemberg, in 1735. As sec-retary of the Treasury, he squeezed the duke's subjects to raise money for the army and court. That drew the people's ire. but be was made more unpopular having Christian mistresses. by for being extravagant and serving a Catholic duke who ruled a largely Protestani population.

When Karl Alexander died, Oppenheimer lost his patron. He was put on trial for illegal relations with Christian women and for abuse of power. On February 4. 1738, he was dragged up a 52step ladder to the gallows and banged in a cage in Stuttgart, in what historians have called a case of judicial murder.

The Court Jews, a minority of the Jewish population, were a unique elite. As the bankers of princes and suppliers of armies, they were prominent in the European economy. But their careers were precarious and dangerous. They served rulers who often were ambivalent and inconsistent in their attitudes toward these favored Jews. And they remained the outsiders in society. the representatives of a defenseless and hated minority. Contempt for the Court Jews permeated the societies. In Berlin, circa 1760, a popular verse on debased coinage referred to the minter Veitel Ephraim: "Outside beauty, inside slime; Outside [King] Frederick, Inside Ephraim." With some notable exceptions, the fate of the Court Jew seemed inevitably to be one of collapse and tragedy.

The history of Court Jews in Central Europe io the 17th and 18th centuries shows numerous cases of imprisonment, torture and expulsion - such as the story of Samuel Oppenheimer, who financed an army for the Habsburg emperor until the late 1600s and was thrown into prison when the government could not pay its debt.

IT IS a history currently on exhibit at the Jewisb Museum in New York, called "From Court Jews to the Rothschilds: Art. Patronage and Power 1600-1800." It is a stunning array of

After the end of the Thirty Years War in 1648, the Germanspeaking lands of Central Europe were divided into hundreds of kiogdoms, dukedoms and principalities. Each had its own ruler, with courts and armites - all of which moceded cash. German rulers turned to Jews, who served as bankers, minters, arms dealers ethat became a dynasty that conand purveyors.

Jews were a minority, restricted tion.

Vienna and Berlin, from which documents, coins, medals and rit-Jews had been barred. It was around these Court Jews that communities were formed, with synagogues to serve them. A letter from Alexander David (1686-1765), the Court Jew in Braunschweig, Germany, for example, asked for princely permission for a room in his bome to be used from time to time to celebrate Jewish festivals. A subsequent letter sought permission to expand and hold services in a separate building. The Jewish Museum's exhibit oo the Court Jews might be called the "fall and rise," with two rooms devoted to the most well-known Hofjuden of the 18th century - Jud Suess Oppenheimer and Rothschild.

Jud Suess, the only one of bundreds of Court Jews who achieved political power, came to an ignominions end. Mayer Amschel Rothschild, on the other hand, brilliantly created a firm. tinued beyond the secood geoera-

Rothschild remained conscious of his roots in the ghetto and of his obligations to the Jewish community. It was his five sons, standiog astride the border betweeo the "ancien regime" and bourgeois modernity, who were dispatched to the great European cities - Vienna, London. Paris and Naples - to expand the family's influence with transactions oo a pan-European scale.

The Rothschild clout was neatly summed up by matriarcb Gulte Rothschild, mother of the five sons, who once asserted: "There will be no war. My sons will not provide the mooey for it." But the contempt the Rothschilds faced was evident in a French print, called "Museum of Horrors," in which her son Nathan, who had lent mooey to the English during the Napoleonic wars, is shown as a dog with a hook-nosed human face digging coins from a grave marked "Waterloo."

THE SIGNIFICANCE of Court German princes that the German Jewry, historians say, is not in the nation was uoable to redeem creation of wealth but rather in itself for their impact on the secularizatioo of Jewish society. The Court Jews exposed it to the problems of acculturation long before Jews had legal equality in Europe. They epitomized the dilemma of the first modern Jews, as they princes."

Hungary's living reminder of 1956 lies low

ASZLO Rajk is one of the years later. most famous names associated with Hungary's failed 1956 uprising against Stalinist rule, but he is keeping a low profile on its 40th anniversary this month.

"This time I'll be declining the inevitable dozens of invitations 1 always get from across the political spectrum," said Rajk, whose fortunes bave mirrored those of Hungary for the past four decades.

"For me, 1956 bas become a more private affair."

For much of his life, bowever, Rajk has been publicly buffeted by the same forces which made Hungary a poignant victim of the Cold War struggle between the Soviet Unioo and the West.

The process has left bim remarkably unpreoccupied by history. "I'm not obsessed by the past," he said. "If someone finds out something new I listen but that's as far as it goes."

Rajk's father, who served as foreign minister under the communists, was executed in 1949 after be was convicted on trumped-up charges of spying for the United States and Yugoslavia.

Fellow party member Janos Kadar, who later put down the 1956 uprising and ruled until 1988, reportedly persuaded Rajk's father to confess and face the gallows. "It's hard to understand what bappened. Kadar was my father's best friend. He was the communist equivalent of my godfather," Rajk said in bis office in the former defence ministry, bombed out in World War II and left uprepaired.

When his father was arrested and his mother Julia jailed, the authorities put the three-monthold baby io an orphanage and gave him the most commoo Hungarian name, Istvan Kovacs.

Unaware that Rajk's mother was still alive, his aunt adopted him when he was four. When Julia was eventually released in 1954, she too had to use a different surname and only regained the right to be called Rajk two - -- ⁻

Suddenly Laszlo had two mothers and a oew identity. "I just decided to call one Mummy and the other Mother," he recalls.

Freed from jail, Julia began a campaign against Stalinist leader Maryas Rakosi to gain justice for her late busband. She would settle for nothing less than a state fumeral.

She was the first to criticize Rakosi in public at a summer gathering in 1956 of supporters of reformist Imre Nagy. The speech arguably set the ball rolling towards the revolutioo which Nagy would eventually lead as prime minister.

Rakosi, seeing the chance of getting off the book for wrongly executing Rajk senior, finally gave in to all of Julia Rajk's demands and allowed a funeral in early October.

Rajk was also allowed to resume using his father's last name before the sbowpiece reburial where hundreds of thousands turned out in a sbow of anger against a frightened government. "I was not really aware of being the focus," Rajk remembers. "For a kid in 1950s Hungary the cameras and guns and soldiers were much more interesting than the ceremony - 1 only concentrated on throwing my bouquet into the grave."

The authorities were relieved that the ceremony passed off peacefully but the calm was short-lived. Revolution exploded two weeks later when secret police sbot and killed demonstrators outside the Hungarian radio building.

When Soviet tanks heralded a bloody end to the 13-day uprising, Julia and young Laszlo took refuge with Nagy and other revolutionary leaders in the Yugoslav Embassy.

As negotiations between the new pro-Moscow government of Kadar and the Yugoslav authorities dragged on, Laszlo and his mother lived under a grand piano in the embassy lobby. "It was quite a scene. There were 14 children and 30-odd adults," be recounted. "For me it Court on the very day Kadar was an advecture. We kids were amazed by this siege that was going on around us and all these tanks which were surrounding the embassy to keep us in."

As food began to run out, Nagy, still refusing to resign, agreed to Kadar's offer to transport everyone to their homes.

Once tricked into leaving, the group, including women and children, was flown to Bucbarest and held in what used to be the summer retreat of the Romanian royal family.

We were treated well at first. The adults were allowed alcobol and to write letters and at Christmas the kids got chocolates, oranges and bananas things we'd never seen."

However, by the spring of 1957 the authorities bad lost patience with Nagy's refusal to cooperate and flew him and the other leaders back to Budapest for interrogatioo. The womeo and children were left bebind and conditions soon deteriorat-

Throughont the next three decades Rajk was an uncomfortable reminder to Kadar of the wrongs of the past.

Kadar's post-1956 bargain with his people, to leave them alone as long as they kept out of politics, also extended to the Rajks. Both were allowed to travel but Julia gave no interviews.

In his adult life Laszlo, a qualified architect, took full advantage of his privileged position by opening the "Rajk Bookshop" of anti-communist samizdat litera-

Today, as Hungarians commemorate a revolution which cost an estimated 25,000 lives and drove a quarter of a million into exile, Rajk savors his final irony.

A main base of the revolutionaries, the Corvin Cioema. which was badly damaged in 1956, has re-opened as a digital multiplex just in time for the anniversary.

Shekel recovers after 5 stormy days

Jerusalem Post Staff

THE shekel's week-long depreciation reversed yesterday, as the dollar lost 0.73 percent of its value against the Israeli currency.

By the eod of tradiog, the green-back had sunk to NIS3.246, while the Bank of Israel's basket of leading currencies shed 0.63% of its shekel value, settling at NIS3.6251.

Yesterday's trading halted, at least temporarily, a five-day slide in the shekel's value, from 3.188 to the dollar on October 11, to 3.27 to the dollar on Monday At one point on Monday, the shekel traded as low at 3.3 to the dollar. The relatively volatile trading in the shekel was fed mainly by unsubstantiated expectations for a package of economic measures, highlighted hy budget cuts beyond the NIS4.9 hillion already planned for the 1996 fiscal year, as well as an interest-rate cut by the Bank of Israel and an administrative devaluation of the shekel.

However, Bank of Israel Governor Jacob Frenkel has repeatedly said the days of administrative devaluations - the last of which was in 1989 - are over, and that monetary policy can only be determined by the overall macroeconomic situation.

The ceotral bank is scheduled to announce its monthly monetary policy oext Mooday. Analysts believe that in the light of recently released data concerning money supply and inflation, interest rates will be lowered, but merely by less than one percentage point.

'last' tax amnesty

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) - South Africa yesterday offered errant taxpayers a fresh annesty, which it said would be their last chance to own up and start paying their dues.

Finance Minister Trevor Manuel announced a repeat of last year's general tax amnesty and new measures providing relief to existing taxpayers, which will go into effect between November 1 and February 28.

But Deputy Finance Minister Gill Marcus warned there would be no further amnesties and said this was the last chance to come clean "before the full weight of the invigorated new revenne services comes into play."

The amnesty was to be reintroduced for people not registered on April 26, 1994, and offers exemption from tax liabilioes due before February 28, 1994.

These people also will be exempted from payment of interest, penalties, and additiooal taxes.

Taxpayers who had underdeclared their taxes would be able to apply for similar relief. Registered taxpayers who have falleo into arrears on income tax, employer's tax or Value Added Tax will likewise be able to apply for relief.

"We believe that in dealing with the matter in this way, we will hring people back into the system," Manuel said.

Manuel estimated that about 420,000 taxpayers who were previously in the system had stopped paying tax and by February owed 6.7 hillion rand (NIS4.8h.).

GM, auto workers end Canadian strike

TORONTO (AP) - The Canadian Auto Workers and General Motors reached a tentative agreement yesterday to end a threeweek strike that has idled more than 46,000 workers across North America, union delegates said.

The union hopes to hold ratificatioo votes today and strikers could be at work by week's end.

The strike by 26,300 workers shut down all GM operations in Canada. GM announced new strike-related layoffs yesterday in the US and Mexico, raising the number of affected workers in those countries to 19,931.

Among the last issues to be resolved were GM's use of outside contractors instead of skilled union-workers, and the mandatory overtime policy at a truck plant in Oshawa, Ontario. GM wanted workers to be more flexible in overtime on short notice, while the union argued that this practice was disruptive to workers' families.

GM said the deal included a "transitioo package" enabling workers at plants in Windsor and Oshawa to move to other plants. The union also wanted the company to reverse plans to contract out about 500 jobs, most of them at its Oshawa assembly opera-tions. A union source said the company had agreed to reduce that number substantially. The strike, which began October 2, is the longest by the CAW since a 97-day walkout in 1970.

In Detroit, negotiators for the United Auto Workers and GM met Monday after a weekend recess. Talks with US union are expected to intensify once there is a final settlement in Canada with the independent CAW.

SEOUL (Reuter) - The chairman of South Korea's sprawling Daewoo Group was summoned by prosecutors yesterday in connection with an arms scandal that involves a former defeose minister, a Daewoo spokesman said.

Yoon Young-suk, who is also chief executive of Daewoo Heavy Industries, returned yesterday morning from an overseas business trip. spokesman Kim Yoon-shik said.

Kim denied any wrongdoing hy the company, one of South Korea's leading conglomerates.

South Korea's main opposition party has alleged an arms dealer was paid bribes of 300 million won (NIS1.2m.) by Daewoo Heavy last year to arrange a government pur-chase of military helicopters. The dealer paid half the money to former Defense Minister Lee Yangho, according to the allegations made in parliament by the National Congress for New Politics. Lee, who was sacked last week hy Presideot Kim Young-sam, has denied the accusations, according to domestic media reports.

The Daewoo spokesman said Daewoo Heavy had paid money to the arms dealer, hut oot as a bribe. "The amount did not exceed 300 million won. But it was a commission and oot bribery. We have been framed by this fake. That's all we can say at the moment."

At the time, Yoon was chairman of Daewoo Heavy, a government arms contractor. Currently, Yoon is in day-to-day charge of the Daewoo group while its powerful founder, Kim Woo-choong, focuses his atten-oon on running its auto division.

Prosecutors declined comment oo the case. President Kim has ordered an investigation.

The affair has embarrassed the president, who has staked his reputation on rooting out corruption in high places in a campaign that led to the trial and conviction of former presidents Roh Tae-woo and Chun Doo-hwan.

Founder Kim Woo-choong is currently appealing a two-year jail sen-tence imposed for bribing Roh. He was one of nine businessmen convicted on similar charges.

The latest scandal has also cast a further pall over a military already reeling from criticism over its failure to intercept a North Korean submarine that intruded last Lee was removed as part of a sweeping reshuffle of military top brass. The changes were portrayed as a move to shake up a military hierarchy accused by politicians and the media of becoming lax and complacent.

The National Congress also accused Lee of leaking classified information on military purchasing plans to the Korean-American arms dealer, Kwoo Pyong-ho.

to discuss effect of ads on children

BRUSSELS (Reuter) - The world advertising industry has invited European consumer organizations to talks about charges of covert and harmful advertising directed zatioo (BEUC) demanded European Unioo legislation a month ago to clamp down on what it said was increasingly devious advertising aimed at children.

BEUC said children encounter advertising from morning to night, at home, at school and at play, and it is often so deviously presented that children do not recognize it as with anyone. He obviously can't such.

proud of it, too.

'I've had games where I probably pitched better, hut under the circumstances, this was a game I'll probably take to the grave with me," the four-time Cy Young Award winner said.

Fred MeGriff drove in three runs as the Braves won their fifth straight game in the postseason, a span in which they've outscored opponents 48-2, A night after John Smoltz led Atlanta to a 12-1 romp, Maddux showed why his team is the defending World Series cham-

"He's something. He really is," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "He has his way with you. He was a master tonight.

"You don't see pitching like this every day. Unfortunately, we are seeing it every day." The shutout lowered the Braves' staff ERA to 1.43 in 12 games this postseason. The win moved the Braves halfway toward another otle, and sent the Series to Atlanta for the next three games. Of the 43 previous teams to take 2-0 leads, 33 have won the Series.

Because of an earlier rainout, there will be no travel day. Instead, Game 3 was scheduled to be played last night, with 1995 World Series MVP Tom Glavine slated for the Braves against David Cone, Maddux made it look easy, allowing six hits in eight innings. He permitted only two runners past first hase and walked none. Wohlers struck out three in the ninth.

The Yankees are hitting just .175 in the Series and are 0-for-9 with runners in scoring position.

"Sure, it's been frustrating," New York's Paul O'Neill said. "We're used to scoring runs. We've got a good offensive elub, but they've shut us down." The Braves are batting .319 and

"That was a typical Maddux game," Braves manager Bohhy Cox said. "He was on top of his game. He was quick, sneaky, and the ball had a tremendous amount of life to it."

With nothing to cheer for, frustrated Yankees fans took to running on the field in the later innings. In fact, five of them touched second base, more people than the Yankees' offense put there. The game ended with a small section of Braves family members and friends chanting and chopping behind home plate.

This can be an intimidating place to pitch at times," Maddux said, "and I tried to block that out tonight."

"It's a little scary sometimes," he said of fans on the field. "You just hope they can keep it under control

It was the kind of neat, efficient performance by Maddux that prompted the Yankees to court him when he became a free agent after the 1992 season.

Maddux took a tour of New York, seeing Yankee Stadium and taking in the show "Miss Saigon" on Broadway, and got a $34 mil-lion, five-year offer. Shortly thereafter, he accepted $28m from the Braves for the same five years.

"I thought the Braves had a better chance to win for a looger time," Maddux said. The most action Maddux had on "Coming into the game, I wasn't thinking about RBIs. I was thinking about getting us another win and another ring," McGriff said.

Mark Lemke doubled with one out in the first and McGriff smgled with two outs. A leadoff double hy Marquis Grissom in the third set up another single by McGriff for a 2-0 lead.

Lemke singled for his fourth hit of the Series in the fifth, Chipper Jones doubled and McGriff had a sacrifice fly. Atlanta made it 4-0 in the sixth oo a double that popped out of Jeter's injured glove hand ending Terry Pendleton's 0-for-24 slump - and a single by Grissom. Andruw Jones, who homered twice and drove in five runs in the opener, was 0-for-3 and hit by a pitch. The 19-year-old rookie made one nice play, safely diving around 1B Tino Martinez after apparently being picked off by catcher Joe Girardi in the second.

Notes: The Yankees went nine straight Series games without a win, a span from 1921-23. ... Yankees reliever Graeme Lloyd is the first Australian-born player to appear in a World Series.

NEW YORK (AP) - It figured to be another long night for the Yankees when Dou Larsen bounced the ceremonial first pitch. Larsen, the only man to pitch a perfect game in World Series history, was anything but perfect on his pregame toss, leaving it a few feet short. It brought a collective groan from the crowd at Yankee Stadium.

So did almost everything else that happened in a 4-0 sbutout to Atlanta Monday night.

It wasn't quite a repeat performance of their Game 1 rout at the hands of the Braves. But the Yankees are now facing both the world ehampions and history. Only two teams - the 1985 Kansas City Royals and '86 New York Mets - have ever recovered from losing the first two games at home to win a World Series.

The Yankees' problems actually started before the game. New York had planned to send Game 3 starter David Cone down to Atlanta early for a full night's rest in anticipation of his assignment tonight.

But Cone's plane had mechanical difficulties and the right-hander remained grounded in New York just like the rest of the Yankees.

"We've just hit a tough spell right now." said Darryl Strawberry, who sat out with a sore broken toe. "We had some time off and right now we really can't find where we're

A sampling of some other Yankees woes: Strawberry's replacement in left field, Tim Raines, committed a throwing error and was thrown out trying to steal.

Shortstop Derek Jeter sustained a bruised left wrist when he was bit by Maddux in the third inning.

The Yankee Stadium crowd was supposed to intimidate the Braves, but roared only during pregame player introductions and when foolish fans tried to outrun security personnel to dive into secood base.

And, maybe above all, Maddux. The four-time Cy Young Award winner befuddled the Yankees all night just like John Smoltz did in Game 1. New York hit only one fly ball out - Bernie Williams' to left in the first.

Williams also had the Yankees' hardest hit ball, a line shot in the fourth that weot directly into first baseman Fred McGriff's glove.

"It was just one of those days," Torre said. Strawberry played for the Mets in 1986 when they stormed back to beat the Boston Red Sox in seven games. He knows that the season isn't over, although it was hard to detect much optimism in the Yankees' elubbouse if this club was capable turning the Series around. "I'm not going to say we can't. We're as good as they are. We've just got to get some hits."

Jeter, the soon-to-be AL Rookie of the Year fought through obvious pain to stay in the game and received ice treatments on the bench between innings after being plunked by Maddux. The mjury may have affected his ability to close his glove on Terry Pendleton's popup down the left-field line in the sixth inning whieb dropped in for a double.

He atoned for the miscoe an inning later when he singled leading off. Tim Raines followed with a single and the Yankees looked to be in business. Boggs, though, hit into a 4-6-3 double play and Williams grounded to second.

When they left Baltimore a week ago as AL champions, the Yankees couldn't wait to get the World Series started.

They are now in Atlanta with the daunting task of having to win two of three in order to play another home game.

Raiders a solid 20-7 lead heading into the fourth quarter. Oakland, which began the season with a rocky I-4 start, raised its record to 4-4 to move one-half game behind San Diego (4-3) for third place in the AFC West. San Diego's starting quartermonth.

Tailenders carry India to win

BANAGALORE, India (Reuter) - A half-century partnership by ninthwieket pair Javagal Srinath and Anil Kumhle carried India to an exciting two-wicket victory over Australia in the Titan Cup triangular tournament on Monday.

Srinath, who made 30 from 23 balls, and Kumble, 16 oot out, put on 52 off 40 deliveries to turn the tables on the Australians.

Chasing 215 for seven, built around Mark Taylor's maiden international one-day century. India had appeared in dire straits at 164 for cight. They eventually scrambled home with seven balls left.

Sachin Tendulkar had hauled his side out of an earlier crisis - they had stumbled to 47 for four - with an accomplished 88 off 111 balls with nine fours. He took a leaf out of book of his opposite number Taylor, who had grafted his way to 105 from 144 deliveries on a slow pitch.

The Jerusalem Post Wednesday, October 23, 1996

A year after his assassination, Yitzhak Rabin is the subject of many TV and radio programs.

TELEVISION

GREER FAY CASHMAN

A YEAR after the assassination of Yitzhak Rabin, the official state memorial service at his graveside on Mount Herzl will be held tomorrow, and relayed on state and commercially owned television, as well as on most radio stations. Radio and TV Rahin specials began last week, and will continue into the first week of pext month.

Israel Television will begin its Rabin tribute broadcasts at 8:45 tonight with Already a Year in which members of the late prime minister's family will talk about the oifficulties of coping with the loss. The program, moderated hy Haim Yavin and Dan Margalit, will also include discussions with politicians and other well-known personalities who will once again review the events and the political climate which led to the killing of the prime minister. They will also speculate on the next potential victim and will propose ways in which another assassination can be prevented.

The program will be followed by clips from Rabin Square in Tel Aviv, taken at a memorial gathering a week after the assassination. Regular program schedules on Channels 1, 2,

ETV, ETV2 and the Family Channel will be disrupted tomorrow as the media and the nation

honor the man who died on the altar of peace. Educational Television will begin at 8:30 a.m., with its own version of Already a Year in which author Galila Ron-Feder discusses violence and tolerance with groups of children and young people from all over the country. The program will be repeated at 2 p.m. and will be aired again on ETV

Channel 2's memorial broadcasts begin at 12 noon with a live transmission from the Hahimah Theater, followed hy relays from Mount Herzl and the Knesset. Later in the evening, Dan Shilon will devote the bulk of his program to Yitzhak Rahin, after which there will be a documentary at 10:30 Yitzhak Rabin of the Palmah. Micha Limor's Expose at 11:15 will be Rahin-oriented, and will, amongst other things, deal with the Commission of Enquiry which was convened in the aftermath of the assassination.

Channel 1 will broadcast from the Knesset at 5 and at 8:45, and will show a program of the festivities following the signing of the peace accord with Jordan, At 10 it will screen a documentary narrated hy Chaim Yavin, Yitzhak Rabin, A Soldier in the Army of Peace.

The Family Channel will show A Year Without Rabin at 8:30 p.m. The live broadcast from Tel Aviv's Mann Auditorium will focus on the reactions of young people and will include members of the Rabin family, entertainers and MKs.

Panel: Gov't is responsible for immigrants robbed in scam

BATSHEVA TSUR

THE government must take responsibility for a scarn in which new immigrants from Russia and Ukraine lost millions of dollars invested in fictitious companies. the Knesset's Immigration and Absorption Committee said yesterday.

"There was criminal negligence here on the part of government officials," said MK Naomi Blumental, head of the committee, who called the special session to discuss the issue. "The committee resolves that the government cannot shake off direct and indirect responsibility for the disappearance of immigrants' funds placed in the hands of Jewish organizanous in the CIS.'

She said that some $20 million had disappeared - the savings of 500 families from Russia and an unspecified number from the Ukraine.

As dozens of immigrants demon-strated outside the Knesset, Vera Butkin told the committee members how the scam had operated.

"There were notices in the waiting room of the Israeli Embassy in Moscow and they mentioned Bank Hapoalim which we had heard of. The whole issue bad an air of formality and respectability," Butkin said.

She said Va'ad Ha'aliya, which gave information on behalf of the government's Liaison Bureau to potential immigrants throughout the CIS, had referred people who wished to transfer money to one such company, ISRASOV.

The company had its offices across from the embassy in Moscow, lending it additional credibility.

We had no idea how to handle money from apartments we had sold and we thought this was official," Butkin said. She said she personally had been referred to the company by Yisrael Ba'aliya MK Yuri Stern.

According to the immigrants, two former Soviet immigrants, David Roitman and Boris Kabakov, beaded the fictitious Russian company and "transferred" their funds to Israel in return for a fee. Persons willing to "invest" their money were told they would receive interest. Many immigrants, who had managed to sell their apartments, put all their savings in the hands of these representatives.

Butkin charged that the two, now living in haredi settlements in Gush Etzion. had set up numerous companies in Israel with these funds but no money reached the olim.

The head of the Ukrainian Va'ad. Yosef Wiesels, was said to be implicated in a similar scam in that country.

Charges have been brought against the government and representatives of its Liaison Bureau by the immigrants, a police represen-tative told the committee. A lawyers representing Ma'ariv publisher Ofer Nimrodi (charged on 14 counts of commissioning wiretaps and paying hush money to Tsur and his partner Rafi Friedan), asked Tel Aviv District Judge George Kara to lift the confidentiality ban on Ginzberg's name. After Kara complied, Ginzberg filed a peti-tion at the District Court against the ruling. arguing that the publication of his name would barm him. However, Beiser ruled that this would not endanger him.

When the National Crimes Squad had diffi-culty in proving theories that Nimrodi allegedly commissioned large scale wiretapping from Tsur and Friedan, detectives searched for a suitable state's witness. Friedan and others offered them some information, but since the former was the chief defendant, detectives decided to try and persuade Tsur.

Tsur refused publicly, but asked Ginzberg to belp him contact Dep.-Cmdr. Benny Kanyiak, assistant to Police Insp.-Gen. Assaf Hefetz, and arrange a secret agreement. However, Ginzberg did not instigate the proceedings, nor did he persuade Tsur to turn state's witness.

With Ginzburg serving as an intermediary. Avi Cohen, then-bead of the National Crimes Squad, and Tel Aviv District Attorney Miriam Rosenthal drafted the agreement.

The agreement involved the largest sum the state has ever paid to a state's witness: S200,000 net payable over three years: the cancellatioo of an indictment of some 40 counts; and the promise not to bring charges against Tsur for failing to pay taxes on bundreds of thousands of shekels.

Nimrodi's lawyers are expected to summon Ginzberg as a defense witness. They bope the publication of his name will result in additional information incriminating Ma' ariv's rivals at Yediot Aharonot.

In an unconnected incident, Ginzberg appeared in the press recently when two men from Rishpon were arrested for hiring a police agent to injure or kill Ginzberg, who is at odds with them over construction at the moshav.

appoint a minister for Arab affairs in a bitter exchange during several urgent motions to the agenda in the Knesset plenum yesterday.

Tourism Minister Moshe Katsav (Likud), who was given the position, responded to the criticism by saying the MKs were "two-faced" and "cynical" and should welcome the appointment, which he said was aimed at helping the Arab sector.

MK Azmi Bashara (Hadash) said the appointment showed the government "treated a group of citizens who theoretically have equal rights like subjects with no nationality who need a special mioister to deal with their affairs."

Taleb MKs a-Sanaa (Democratic Arab Party) and Haggai Merom (Labor) said the appointment put the Arabs back several years.

Salah Salim (Hadash) was removed from the plenum after er.

while Ze'evi raised his own motion in favor of the appointment.

Katsav called on a-Sanaa to apologize and said the previous Labor government had also had a minister in the post.

"Any attempt to create a rift or unrest between the Jewish and Arab citizens would result io an almighty boomerang," Katsav said.

He admitted the Arab sector had not been sufficiently developed over the years and said he boped to belp provide jobs, housing, industrial start-ups, town planning and other services for Arab citizens.

Later in the evening, Salim raised a motion concerning 40 years since the Kafr Kassem massacre. In a debate that passed quietly he described the day of the massacre as "a black day in the relations between the two peoples which will be remembered forevPolice are investigating the incident.

THE Defense and Finance ministries agreed yesterday to modify the Demobilized Soldiers Law, adding some restrictions but also granting more funds to the released soldiers.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai and Finance Minister Dan Meridor also agreed to come up with further modifications that would give released soldiers from combat units more benefits than those who served in home front or service units.

A joint statement from the ministries stressed that the modifications "do not harm the scope of the sums available to soldiers today."

Under the current rules, male soldiers receive about NIS 3,000 upon their release, while female soldiers get NIS 2,000. Men are then eligible for another NIS 11,500 in grants to help pay for tuition, for professional training or to open a business. Womeo veterans are eligible for NIS 7,600.

Under the modifications, the grants can no longer be used to pay rent. The ministries said in their statement that the lion's share, some 70 percent, of the grant money had been paid out for this purpose and that many people had defrauded the government out of the money by submitting fictitions rental contracts. This new restriction frees up some NIS 150 million for other purposes. On the other hand, any soldier who does not make use of all the grant money he is eligible for will now receive the remaining sum at the end of five years. Until now, any money not used was forfeited.

copters and accurately fire at them, dramatically changing the battlefield of the future.

"We are the first country in the world to have a tank force which, while in motion, can lock on to a moving target either in the air on the ground," said Maj.-Gen. (res.) Israel Tal, the defense minister's adviser on weapons development and father of the Merkava tank.

"These are the most advanced tanks in the world, with a cannon equal to the German's and quality ammunition developed by Israel," Tal was quoted as saying in the latest issue of the Israel Air Force Magazine, which appears today.

While the attack helicopters have traditionally been the hitter enemy of tanks on the modern battlefield, the Merkava equipped with Baz will become the attack chopper's nemesis in the battlefield of the future, Tal said.
